

Executive Profile

Phillip A. Infelise
Vice Chairman of the Board

Philip Infelise is Vice Chairman of the Board of CresaPartners LLC and Director of the National Project Management Leadership Group. A leading real estate professional for more than 30 years, Mr. Infelise is also a nationally recognized corporate relocation advisor who has successfully managed more than 600 projects.

He excels in the strategic facility planning phase of project management (establishing programmatic requirements, facility specifications, project budgets, and schedules) and has an outstanding record of cost-saving performance during the design and construction execution phases.

Based in the firm's Denver office, Mr. Infelise founded the Denver Project Management Group, wherein he ensures consistency and client satisfaction with CresaPartners' services.

Prior to CresaPartners, Mr. Infelise did considerable consulting on strategies and projects both domestically and internationally. He was Chief Operating Officer of the ORS Group, a national facilities planning and project management consultancy in Washington, DC, he served as a consultant to the U.S. State Department and the Agency for International Development, and he ran the operations of two construction companies.

Mr. Infelise is on the Smart Girl Board of Directors and Jubilee Support Alliance Board of Directors. He received his BA in International Development at the University of California at Santa Cruz and has a Construction Management Certification.